Juniperus chinensis "Mint Julep"

Step 1 – Trimming and jin work

Step 3 – Potted

Step 2 – Additional trimming and wiring

It's a bad time of year to transplant, although junipers have better luck than other trees. This tree is currently in a larger pot than what it is ultimately going to be. However, it is too small for this first transplanting. Thus, I have tried to keep as many roots as I could so the left side is mounded up. Because I tilted the tree, I felt it necessary to keep more roots at this time on the left side. I also do not know the horticultural idiosyncrasies of this variety.
